Presidents Message

Hello Everyone,

It's hard to believe that the month of May is upon us. Time flies when you're having fun. Numismatics is probably the reason!

Have you heard about the new $100 bill? According to a recent press release, the new C notes flank the familiar face of Ben Franklin with an assortment of anti-counterfeiting technology, including a touch of "Avatar" via a new blue security strip. This 3-D strip features tiny Liberty Bells that morph into the number 100 when the bill is tilted, one of several changes that treasury officials hope will frustrate global counterfeiters. The strip is actually woven into the bill, rather than printed on the paper. And you won't need special glasses to see (or spend) them; all the new technology is visible to the naked eye. The bill - due to debut Feb. 10, 2011 - also features a color-changing inkwell and Liberty Bell to the right of Franklin's familiar visage. Also, an embedded thread to Franklin's left will glow pink when placed under ultraviolet light. And the words "The United States of America" will be micro-printed on Franklin's jacket collar - a 21st century touch for the 18th century Founding Father. Again, all of these changes have been incorporated into the new C note in an attempt to stay ahead of counterfeiters. I hope it works!

Nothing is more common on earth than to deceive and be deceived.

Johann G. Seume, 1763-1810, German Theologist

Interesting Coin of the Month

1914/3 Buffalo Nickel

This overdate is a testimony that new things can and are still being discovered in our coinage. This variety was not discovered until 1996. It was most likely overlooked for almost 100 years because the overdate is very difficult to see, especially on lower grade coins. An additional overdate has been reported for this date from the Denver mint and one has been rumored to exist from San Francisco. Presently only the Philadelphia issue is recognized and graded by the major grading services. Although it does command a premium it is not as widely collected as a member of the Buffalo nickel set like the 1918/7 overdate or the 1937-D three-legged issue. Nonetheless it is an interesting coin which again attests to the fact than new things can still be discovered. Keep looking closely at your coins; you never know what you may find.

UNS Program for May's Meeting

May is our birthday. We will be asking past Presidents and officers to speak. Also please see the back page for submitted drawings to be voted on for this year's UNS medal. If you have a last minute idea please bring it to our meeting and it will be included in the voting.

Book Review

This month's book is a reference on the Barber Dime series. I purchased this book at the recent ANA in Ft. Worth as it is a recent release. Suggested retail price is $29.95, it is 422 pages in length. This book is published in black and white and contains a wealth of information for anyone interested in this series. There is a chapter for each date and mintmark as well as chapters for each proof issue.

The following characteristics for each issue are outlined –

- Important Varieties
- General Comments
- Strike
- Luster
- Surfaces
- Toning
- Eye Appeal

Additionally significant high grade examples and their recent auction appearances are documented. Basically this is a 'condition census' for each issue.

Finally, there are tables similar to the recent 'Red Books' on different series' of coins outlining the population estimated to have survived in mint state conditions. Valuations for each grade are also included.

The chapter on the 1894-S dime is quite extensive and contains a lot of great information regarding this classic rarity.

This is a book designed for the specialist of the series but as with any numismatic book, it contains a wealth of information which has been painstakingly assembled.

Young Numismatist's Corner

This is an announcement for next month's young numismatists extravaganza.

We would like to advertise a fantastic night of activities for the youth of our club, their friends, and the youth of any other collecting club. Any and all are welcome to the June YN meeting.

Not to give away all of the details but every youth will go home with not one, not two, but most likely many coins and prizes and gifts.

So..... Please let all of your friends know of this special event. Invite them and tell them how fun coin collecting can be and that all members and non-members are eligible for coins, prizes and fun.

1916-D MERCURY DIME

Added Mintmark

GENUINE

Pick Up Point

Shape of Mintmark

Frequency Encountered
Very common

Identification Difficulty
Moderate

Value
Medium to high

The 1916-D Mercury dime is probably the most altered coin seen. The favorite way to create this rarity is to add a "D" mintmark and this is the key to identification. Genuine coins have a square D and the inside of the D is triangular. The serifs are not pointed and the D is crisp and sharp. There are 4 reverse dies of which two show repunching of the mintmark showing a notch on the upper serif. It is actually more difficult to identify a fake if the dime is well worn. A worn mintmark/coin can make the diagnostics more difficult to observe.

Feature Article – E Pluribus Unum Doug Nyholm

We are all familiar with the Latin expression 'E Pluribus Unum' which appears on all of our coins today. Probably most of us although not versed in Latin know of its meaning – One composed of many, or One out of many, but what about the large list of Latin legends which appear on dozens of other coins which circulated in America? Granted, most of these no longer appear and virtually all appeared on what we refer to as 'colonial' coins. For instance the 'Conferderatio Cents' listed on page 54 of the 2011 Red Book have the legend "AMERICA INIMICA TRYANNIS." However the Red Book does not translate this legend which means "America, hostile to tyrants." Below is a list of other Latin legends appearing on colonial coins and the translations.

This list is by no means 100% complete but contains most of the coins listed in the "Red Book." A couple of them do not have translations above, maybe you can find what they mean. Hopefully this may be of interest to you and as most are common on colonial coins but what they mean and where they are found can be quite elusive.

Identify This Coin

Can you identify the coin pictured above? What date is on this coin? Where or what book would you first look for this coin?

Good Luck!

[Last month's coin was an 1818 Texas Jola Token. JAG was the coiner, Jose Antonio de la Garza. It is very rare and virtually all have been found in the San Antonio Texas area.]
